Hi Paula,

Greetings from Bangkok! Fernando and I are having a really good time! It's a great city for shopping. Yesterday, we went to a huge weekend market. It was full of really interesting things to buy, especially clothes. And the prices are great! Things here are not nearly as expensive as they are at home. Of course, Fernando tells me I'm spending too much money, but you know him. He never buys anything!

Have you ever eaten Thai food? It's delicious! We just had a wonderful dinner in one of the restaurants on the river. Fernando ordered green curry and rice, and I had my favorite dish, Mee Krob – crispy noodles with shrimp and chicken. For dessert, we had fried bananas. Everything was so good! It was also fun to watch the boats pass by!

One thing I've noticed is that some restaurants make their curries less spicy for foreigners. Yesterday, I told our waiter, "This curry isn't hot enough for us!" He smiled and said, "Some foreigners don't like spicy food."

The Advice Sisters

Who would many young people go to these days for advice on a personal problem? The answer is "the advice sisters." Alison Blackman Dunham and Jessica Freedman are twin sisters who work together to provide a unique service. In their advice columns, both online and in print, Alison and Jessica offer a double take. In other words, each sister gives her own answer to each question. This means that the person who asks a question always receives two replies.

The advice sisters have co-authored a book and co-written several e-books. They have also worked together on an audiotape series about communicating more effectively at work, in life, and in love. Although they work together a lot, these two remarkable women also have separate careers. Alison is the owner of a public relations company in New York City. She is often quoted in career magazines and has written several books on managing life and career. Jessica, on the other hand, teaches writing and literature at several colleges. She owns an editing business, has written several books and film scripts, and is also a lawyer !

When do the advice sisters ever find time to relax with their family and friends?
